Teller's Opinion of the River and Harbor Steal.

Final Adjournment of Congress Not Yet Taken.

Plans of Cabinet Members for Their Summer Vacation.

ADJOURNMENT

WASHINGTON, August 7.—An amendment offered in the senate this evening by Cameron for final adjournment at eleven o'clock to night was defeated through the failure of the clerk to hear the response of Senator Bayard who voted in the affirmative. Had this vote been so recorded, the amendment would have been adopted. The president and cabinet are at the executive mansion this evening for the purpose of facilitating the adjournment of congress. All congressional business was acted on as soon as received. The president approved the bill to reimburse the creek orphan fund, the act for sale of part of the Omaha Indian reservation Neb., act for relief of executors of J W Forney, sundry civil appropriation bill, act to establish post routes, knit goods bill, act relinquishing title which still remains in the United States to all portions of grounds within the city of Burlington, Iowa.

TELLER'S VIEWS ON THE VETO

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 7.—Among the rumors concerning the river and harbor bill recently passed and actions of persons of influence with regard to it, is one that has been of great annoyance to Secretary Teller to the effect that he not only voted against it ... the bill in the cabinet sessions, but ... in the senate chamber to secure its passage over the veto. This report Teller says is unblushing ... He says that his business on the floor of the senate on the day the bill was passed over the veto was of quite another character and instead of urging such a course as that taken by the senate he has expressed himself to several senators quite warmly on the subject sustaining the veto. He declares that he never voted for a river and harbor bill while in the senate and since he left the senate his opinions on this sort of legislation have undergone no change.

THE CABINET VACATION

WASHINGTON, August 7.—Immediately on adjournment of congress the president and his chief will enter upon a long planned summer vacation trip. The president proposes to take a cruise in the United States steamer Dispatch. He will be accompanied by Secretary Chandler and perhaps other members of the cabinet. The secretary of the navy proposes to make an inspection of northern and eastern navy yards, and the presidential party will probably visit Long Branch, Newport, Boston, New London, and other ... resorts, and other members of the cabinet will scatter at once. Postmaster-General Howe leaves to-morrow for his home in Wisconsin, and will be absent until September. Secretary Lincoln had intended to accompany Sheridan on a summer's trip through the Yellowstone country, but the death of his mother has caused him to abandon ... He will spend the summer vacation at Rye Beach, N H. Secretary Folger will not be absent for any length of time during summer, but will content himself with a brief excursion northward when the duties of his office will permit. The attorney general will divide his time between Long Branch and Cape May as soon as the star route case will allow his departure. Secretary Teller will not leave until he has disposed of the eight hundred new appointments provided for in the legislature appropriation bill. The appointments began to-day. Secretary Frelinghuysen goes to Long Branch and from there will go to Cape May for a portion of the season.

CHICAGO, August 7. The Tribune's Washington correspondent says: "Two years ago, the total appropriations for the general government were $190 000 000 last year they ran up to $216 6?1,383, and this year they have been swelled up to the sum of $203,-?03 480."

United States consuls—Thomas J Barry at San Louis Potosi Mexico, T W ... of Maine, Aspinwall. William L Welch of Pennsylvania, at Florence. W H Francis receiver of public moneys at Bismarck D T. Postmaster—F W Nye, Laramie City, Wyoming.

HOUSE PROCEEDINGS

The house met at ten o'clock. The senate amendment to the supplemental post route bill was concurred in.

The sundry civil bill received the signature of the speaker.

Saturday's session then adjourned, and the session of Monday opened.

Burrows moved to appropriate $5,000 to allow the select committee of nine to examine into the works for improvement below Cairo in the Mississippi river now progressing, and the methods employed in those improvements. The committee was also authorized to inquire into the outlet and jetty system adopted.

Robeson introduced a bill identical with the tax bill in the senate, but without providing for the polariscope test and tried to get the bill through, but only sixty voted on the question and Hills and Cox raised the point of no quorum. Robeson withdrew the bill, saying that he had made an honest endeavor to reduce taxation.

Recess for two hours.

After recess the speaker announced the appointment of the select committee to investigate methods of improvement of the Mississippi river.

The house then took another recess until eight o'clock. Hiscock, who made the motion stating the chances were even that congress would adjourn to night as soon as the house reassembled. Anderson of Kansas, moved that when the house adjourned it be to meet to morrow, saying it seemed their royal majesties, the senate could not sit at night and that the house had nothing in the world to do.

Blackburn suggested that the house adjourn until Friday and Hiscock stated that if the senate took up the tax bill to-morrow he would have no objection to adjourning until that day. Thereupon Blackburn withdrew his motion and the house adjourned until to-morrow.

Among a few members there was a good deal of indignation manifested at the action in adjourning to day without taking a resolution for final adjournment. Members congregated in groups and many expressed a desire that the president avail himself of his constitutional right of declaring both houses adjourned. A strong sentiment prevailed that the senate had treated the house in a cavalier manner.

SENATE PROCEEDINGS

The house joint resolution appropriating $60 000 to supply deficiency in the appropriation for fees of United States district attorneys for the last fiscal year passed.

House resolution instructing the secretary of the navy to convene a court of inquiry to investigate the loss of the steamer Jeannette and death of Lieutenant Commander De Long passed.

House joint resolution for joint select committee upon American ship building and ship owning interest passed.

House bill passed for railway bridge across the Mississippi at or near the mouth of the upper Iowa river.

Plumb offered a concurrent resolution for adjournment at 5 p m.

Morrill objected to present consideration of the resolution in order to have it lie over for the day under the rules.

Cameron of Pennsylvania, then moved executive session, but yielded temporarily to Morrill, who appealed to the other side to allow the tax bill to come up and either be voted upon without further debate or at a time fixed.

Brown offered a resolution presenting the thanks of congress to John F Slater, of Connecticut, for his donation of one million dollars to the cause of education in the south. Referred.

Blair, chairman of the committee on education and labor called up a resolution directing investigation, during recess, into labor strikes. This is to be made by the committee on education and labor and is to include the subjects of the relation between capital and labor, wages and hours of labor, condition of laboring classes in the United States, and their relative condition and wages, as compared with similar classes abroad, with causes and agencies producing strikes. The committee is to recommend legislation to remove or modify such causes and provide against their recurrence, and is empowered to send for persons and papers, administer oaths, and visit by sub-committees different parts of the country. The resolution was adopted, with the amendment offered by George, directing inquiry into the division between labor and capital in their productions in the United States.

The Nicaragua ship canal bill was made the special order for the second Monday in December.

Ben Holliday's bill was made the order for the second Tuesday in December.

Shortly after one vote was taken on the pending motion, Morrill meanwhile insisting upon the consideration of the tax bill. The motion prevailed—yeas, 31; nays, 19. All negative votes were republican.

When the doors reopened the senate proceeded to consideration of the house concurrent resolution for final adjournment on Saturday, August 5th. Cameron of Wisconsin moved the amendment of Monday.

Saulsbury inquired of Morrill if he intended to call up the tax bill, and received an affirmative answer.

Sherman said that he would never vote to adjourn until the tax bill was voted on.

Beck said that the tax bill, as proposed, only meant an attempt to take the bill from the senate, when it was well known that the house had no quorum. The amendment was lost, yeas, nineteen, nays, nineteen no quorum.

Adjourned until to-morrow.

State News

He was formerly a physician of Boston in good circumstances, but had lost his family and property by fire there, and was supposed to be demented because of his trouble. He had earned a precarious livelihood since coming to Denver by selling papers.

THE WAR IN EGYPT.

England's Ultimatum---Russia Preparing for War.

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 7.—An unpleasant feeling has been caused to the porte on account of hoisting the English flag in public buildings when the British occupied Suez. The porte has been assured the raising of the flag has no significance. The flag displayed was that of the consulate and was hoisted in conjunction with the Egyptian flag. This explanation is not considered satisfactory.

NEW YORK, August 7.—The opposition cable dispatches which are to be received with great caution, contain the following from London: The government has instructed Lord Dufferin, the British ambassador at Constantinople, to present an ultimatum to the porte demanding the sultan to at once declare Arabi Pasha a rebel, and accept the English proposals for joint action in Egypt. In the event of the porte failing to comply, Lord Dufferin will be recalled and the landing of Turkish troops in Egypt would be opposed by the English. The porte has requested a delay for the consideration of the demand. Lord Dufferin has telegraphed the foreign office here for further instructions. It is believed the government will not consent to any further delay. A dispatch from Constantinople reports great excitement there, on the announcement of the British ultimatum.

ALEXANDRIA, August 7.—The vicinity of Ramleh is quiet to-day. No movement of the enemy is visible. General Allison visited the wounded to-day and found all but two doing well. He addressed the mariners, praising their gallantry under heavy fire yesterday. Lieut. Vyse and three others, killed yesterday, were buried this afternoon with military honors in the English cemetery outside Ras El Tin gates. General Graham, in the steamer Cygnet, will reconnoitre Aboukir forts Monday. The troop ship Euphrates arrived here this morning.

NEW YORK, August 7.—Smalley, the Tribune's London correspondent, gives the true inwardness of the Egyptian imbroglio. He writes, "Arabi Pasha is nothing more nor less than an unscrupulous military adventurer, with an army largely made up of ex-convicts and other criminals. It is his object merely to establish military despotism in Egypt for the benefit of himself and his followers. To put down such adventurers and to establish the authority of the law again, are to work directly in favor of the better future of Egypt, thus giving the true national party in that country a chance."

Rear-Admiral Nicholson, commanding the European fleet, was yesterday instructed by cable to hasten the departure of his vessels to Tripoli and Tunis to remove consular records of those places, and to dispose the vessels of his fleet along the southern Mediterranean coast, so as to protect American interests in that locality.

LONDON, August 7.—It is rumored at St. Petersburg that Russia is making warlike preparations at Odessa in view of possibility of troubles between Turkey and England.

ALEXANDRIA, August 7.—The armored train returned from Mahalla Junction without engaging.

CHANGED BY CONFERENCE.

Rev. W. L. Slutz Transferred from Colorado Springs to a New Field of Labor.

After having so faithfully served the cause of Methodism in Colorado Springs for several years, it will be learned with regret by many that Rev W. L Slutz has been transferred by conference to Akron, Ohio. The vacancy thus caused will be filled by Rev Mr Arundel, of Akron.

The following very appropriate resolutions have been tendered him by the trustees and stewards of the First Methodist church.

WHEREAS, In the providence of God and the economy of our church, the time has arrived when our relations with Rev W L Slutz, as pastor and people, must be dissolved; and

WHEREAS, We deem it most fitting and appropriate that some tangible expression of the cordiality of our relations during his pastorate be made to him, and a recognition of our deep and lasting obligations to himself and his devoted and amiable wife for their untiring zeal and labors in the upbuilding of our church, therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, in behalf of the church membership, extend to him our hearty gratitude for his most pleasurable and beneficial association with us during the past three years.

Resolved, That in the projection and completion of our beautiful church, we recognize the arduous and wearisome duties that devolved upon him, the skillful management of its finances, and his earnest, personal interest in the work, and we shall ever regard it as a fitting memorial of his valuable services.

Resolved, That Brother Slutz has, by his uniform courtesy and kindness, by his purity of life and teaching, and by the faithful discharge of the duties pertaining to his office secured to himself the love and confidence of this people, which will follow and be with him and his wife, in whatever field of labor they may be called to serve, and it is our prayer that prosperity, happiness, and health may, through the providence of God, be granted and continued to himself and family during the future of their lives.

Yellow Fever

GALVESTON, August 7.—The cases of suspicious sickness on the schooner Henrietta, from Matamoras, at quarantine, have developed into yellow fever. One death.

AUSTIN, August 7.—The governor received from the state health officer at Brownsville a statement that eight or ten deaths from yellow fever had occurred at that place in the last two weeks. He urges citizens to organize, as the disease is epidemic.

WHAT IS MAN?

An Able and Eloquent Answer By Bishop Foster.

Sermon At the Methodist Church On Sunday.

A congregation so large that some were obliged to stand greeted Bishop R S Foster at the Methodist church Sunday morning. The sermon was from the following text:

What is man that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man that thou visitest him?—Psalms viii, 4.

God studied through nature, said the bishop, is the same as God studied through revelation. To find out in regard to any being we find out how he manifests himself. No man ever saw mind. It is hidden. No man ever saw God, neither can see Him. He hides Himself even from the highest beings. There is no reason to believe that the higher beings we call angels have any view of God. He is not an object of sense. We judge of what God is by His acts. This is important in this day in regard to the consideration of metaphysical truth, which is at the bottom of all truth. The matter is so important that I will give an illustration. You see a man go into a forest. There is a body with an ax on its shoulder going among the trees. You argue that he intends to cut down a tree. You follow him, and see him standing by a large tree. He lays off his garments, takes his ax, and under his blows that tree falls. He puts on his coat, puts his ax on his shoulder, and leaves the woods. Now that considered in itself looks like an absurd performance. If this were all we should say that he was an idle and wasteful man. Pretty soon two other men and several yokes of oxen come upon the scene. They take this fallen tree down to the bank of a river. Then it is united with other trees and they all float down the river to a saw mill. Then this tree is cut into planks. The planks are carried to a ship yard, and put with other planks, and the ship-builders put them together, and there comes forth a great ship on which men and women can glide over the ocean. Now we see that all the time there was an end in view. We see that there was a mind behind all this. Thus it is that by studying the expression and manifestation of mind we understand its controlling motive. In the same way we study the controlling motion of this universe. Millions and millions of years ago, how many I will not try to say, there was a manifestation, a motion, the agent hidden. There was the introduction of disorganized particles. They were gathered together in little globes, and then out over that empty space where there were no worlds, worlds in the splendor of their heated glory rimmed the horizon.

But if the work had stopped then we would never have got the idea. As in the case of the man and the tree, so here we must hitch on one action to another. So here we must wait. What object is there in making worlds? Why make worlds? Why place these stars and hang these suns? Why this exhibition of power and ingenuity? Wait a hundred million years, say. These worlds have taken on them cool surfaces and atmospheres. The atmosphere breaks the surfaces into loose soils, and the worlds take on blankets of soft earth. Out of the soil springs vegetation, and the hills and valleys become beautified by grass, and herb, and flower, and trunk, and tree. But why plant trees and flowers? No one can understand it. But wait. He has a plan in it. If we wait, we see other forms of life, insects and the lower forms of existence, and all the earth is filled with life. And now we see that these plants were put here to furnish nutriment to the animal life. But why these birds? Why these beasts? There is an ecstatic life, a certain kind of joy in it, but this does not explain its existence. No one knows why. Did He do it merely to furnish joy to Himself.

The earth has bloomed for half a million of years, perhaps for millions of years. The great Worker kisses the earth and then rises a man and looks abroad over the earth. Beast, bird, and tree and flower come and bow before him for his service, his use, and his study. And this creature looks through it all and sees the object. We begin to see what it all meant,—a home for him. The mind of God away back there, stirred by the paternal feeling, was providing a home for his children.

This same David says, "The fool hath said in his heart, 'There is no God.'" The fool to-day says the same thing. He is led to it by the same kind of stupidity. He has an eye in his body but none in his mind. The reasoning man, going away from his Bible, sees the connection of God's acts. God was working for His children. Knowledge is the ability to look out on the earth and trace the connection of the objects that meet us. There is a connection between inorganic and organic life. Our experience has been too brief to find out all the connections. We have found some. And when we have acquired all knowledge, then we will see the connection of everything. A mosquito has a function, every insect a plan. Let the church always rejoice in the researches of science. Let there never come from a preacher a word against science or the workers in science. They are preaching God as we are preaching God. Science is the sister of religion, often being but very often served by unworthy servants, as the pulpit is often served by unworthy servants. But the discoveries of science enable us to look into the mind of God.

This great gift has in it certain things which have no meaning whatever, except in relation to man, and very important things God is preparing for his children, as a father prepares for his daughter who is about to be married. Everything points to the coming of man. Pigments, ores, timbers, are all of great importance as to man, nothing in relation to anything else. They point to the necessities of man. Take Adam as he appeared on the earth, naked, with no shelter, not even with a pen knife. Other creatures find all their wants supplied right at hand. The man begins to feel the wants, and craving and gnawing of his stomach six hours after he is placed on the earth. The means of supplying this want is placed right at his door. But his nature has other great and crying wants. This world is the bureau, the trunk, in which are stored what he wants. He must supply these things. First, he must have a knife to trim the trees of his garden, and to kill and prepare animals for his food. He must learn agriculture, architecture, the manufacture of cloths. He must have the genius and power to find material to build homes. He must build houses. He must find instruments to take out of the tree the smoothly shaven timber. He must find genius to take out of this magazine ores. God gives him this genius, and gives him the things he wants. Take the case of iron. It is of use only to man, and he can not come to the highest development without it. Gold, silver, iron serve a great purpose for man, but none at all to any one else. Without iron there would be no buildings, no machinery, nothing of all the great world that man has built. Go into a city and look on its mighty buildings. Go into the stores and see the silks, the other goods, the groceries brought from every clime, prepared for man's use and necessary to his development. Look at the implements, the books, go into the museums and the universities. Study these things, and consider that without iron they are impossibilities and man would wander over the earth a savage from birth to death. Does not this indicate that God made them for a purpose?

Without our Bibles, every man who has a brain and knows how to use it, finds God. Birds and flowers and trees and sun and stars were all for that imperial being to come down to earth.

I know I am talking a long time, but I shall probably never preach in Colorado Springs again, never see these mountains again, and I think you will bear with me. You will have occasion to remember because you do bear with me. ["Go on go on," shouted the brethren.]

I shall endeavor to show that God has designed man for a special purpose. What is there in man that should give him such a position? Is it exaggeration or is there a reason for it. The Bible shows that from eternity God has been planning for us and our cousins in other worlds that we do not know much about. Before the world there was made an atonement for man. There is nothing here worth anything but man, not gold, nor silver, nor starry sky, nothing but man and his brothers who stand above him. If you will study you will see that this is so. The mistake we make is that we do not study man at all. Most persons think that these forms before me are men and women. They are beautifully adorned and beautiful in structure, but these forms are not men and women. If they were, it would be impossible to find any particular value in a man. What is the fact about that form of yours? It does not differ in any essential respects from the forms about us. It is made of the same materials and is scarcely more ingenious in structure. The other animals gather their food from the fields, he gets his by turning up the fields with a plow. They have the same troubles as he. The same process of destruction comes to us as to them. In the one case we have a funeral ceremony, but one is forgotten almost as soon as the other. The destiny of his form is the common destiny of the forms that roam the forest. A human being as a physical organization, so far forth as he is a form, is not different from the beasts that live in the slime and filth of the earth. The fool shows his bestiality when he claims to belong to that form. But man is a spirit. His value is found in another part of his nature. I am addressing two congregations, one of animals, one of angels or that akin to angels, I mean souls. There are souls here. We can not see them as we can not see the Father's spirit. I think I can make it plain to a child or to an old man who has again become a child that it is a true declaration that there are two congregations, one of clay that goes back to the dust of earth, and one of men and women that does not go down to the dust of earth. In these souls I find the answer to the question. Had David paused to give an answer, for he knew what the answer was, he would have said, "Man is a child of God, man is a celestial spirit." Man has a nature one with God. How shall I prove it? I think I can. It is time for the pulpit and the Christian world not to stand on mere assertions that there are souls, polluted indeed by sins, but souls that are redeemed but to prove that these souls are real, that they have the spirit and substance of life and virtue.

How shall we prove it? Pause a moment. Ask yourself the question, "Am I different from the body which I call myself? Am I something else? Am I able to perceive that

The convention will transact the foregoing and such other business as may properly come before it.

It is recommended that the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh judicial districts select delegates at the same time of selecting delegates to this convention to nominate candidates for district judges and district attorneys.

JOHN L. ROUTT, Chairman.
GEORGE T. CLARK, Secretary.

The Denver Tribune does not seem to forget that Dorsey is still secretary, nor that Belford failed to vote to sustain the veto.

We are not hearing quite so much about Pennsylvania politics as we did for a while, but the independents have evidently come to stay.

President Arthur and one or more members of the cabinet are going to take a cruise in a United States vessel for the purpose of—not fun—inspecting the navy yards.

The comments on the appointment of W. W. Astor to succeed George P. Marsh as minister to Italy are not altogether flattering, and the fact that Astor is a stalwart does not seem in the eyes of some people sufficient reason for inflicting him on the poor Italians.

An exchange says that "New Jersey secured over three hundred thousand dollars "in the river and harbor bill, and hence that "there is little prospect for the defeat of Robe-"son for renomination." This is a good illustration of the evils of the present way of passing river and harbor bills.

Congress will adjourn this week. During the recess money will be accumulating, but there is some satisfaction in thinking that as the next session will be a short one, there will not be so much time for wasting public funds. There is a quite general opinion that this has not been a congress to whose record people "will point with pride."

Seeing that Judge Belford was in Massachusetts when the vote on the river and harbor bill was taken, and that the vote was actually recorded in Washington, it is hard to see how he could have voted on the question.—[Denver Times.

But why was he in Massachusetts? One of the things for which he was elected is to be Washington when the roll is called.

The Cincinnati Commercial does not believe that its criticisms of Speaker Keifer should cease because he has been renominated, but says plainly that he ought not to be elected to the next congress. Such doctrine must be pretty hard for the papers who believe that a person should not think much for himself, but still it is a doctrine which will appear to some people manly and not unreasonable.

The Chronicle furnishes this poor comfort to some of our aspiring statesmen: "Judge "Kelley assures us that after the census of "1890 Colorado will have three, and possibly "five, representatives in congress. But by "that time the present aspirants will be grow-"ing old. The ardor of their ambition will "have abated. Their zest for the good and "the great things will, perchance, have palled. "Thus is good fortune often too slow."

The Denver Inter-Ocean has a brief article representing the opinion that Denver papers make too much of Denver and too little of Colorado. Attention is called to the fact that Denver does not exist of itself and on its own resources. We extract the following: "The "arrogant claim sometimes made by Denver "that 'Denver is Colorado,' is not only not "true, but it is a breach of that fellowship "which ought to exist throughout this region. "The mines of Colorado are outside of Den-"ver; the finest views in Colorado are outside "of Denver; the best farms are distant from "Denver; the great stock ranges are away "from Denver; some of the greatest of Colo-"rado's manufactories are in other cities—in "fact, Colorado's main industries are not in "Denver, though they all contribute to Den-"ver's growth. Denver owes more to Colo-"rado than Colorado owes to Denver."

It is believed that Senator John A. Logan, of Illinois, if called upon by the people, would not refuse to stand next time for the presidency. He is one of the trio of "bosses" that didn't make Grant president. We have had poor presidents and we fear that we shall have them again, but we sincerely trust that a kind providence will preserve us from the ungrammatical gentleman from Illinois.

The remarks of Dr. Moore, the chancellor of the University of Denver, are worthy of mention. He said that they had no desire to antagonize Colorado College, that they wanted to keep abreast of every college in the state and to make it difficult for any college to keep abreast of them. Such statements deserve to be noticed when we remember that the Methodists are among the most sectarian of denominations. All the schools of this new west need to work earnestly and unitedly for a higher culture and higher morality.

There is not a democrat in either branch of congress who does not know that every dollar that was voted in that river and harbor abomination for local improvements in the states was so voted in flagrant and undisputed violation of the constitution of the United States. It would be a great gain and good to this country, and to the democratic party, if every democrat in both branches of congress who voted for that measure, either before or after the veto, could be elected to stay at home whenever an opportunity offers to remand him to his proper post in private station.—[Omaha Herald.

We suggest whether it would not be a gain to apply the same discipline to some republican members.

ROBAT,

With Variations.

All his devious ways 'tis our duty to scan,
[illegible] the sad lore of poor fallible men;
To [illegible] of his weakness not less than his power,
And to compass his span through his limited hour.

Oh, 'twere well could we find between spirit and letter,
That the balance of compt still accrues for the better;
That folly, though rampant, is subject to sense,
And that wisdom o'erpoises shillings and pence.

Old Robat had dickered and shifted amain
In his struggle with life hardly dreaming of gain,—
Though he dabbled in monte, and poker, and euchre
As legitimate means for achieving his lucre,—

Incidentally dabbled, for pastime and pelf,
[illegible] a short absence from counter and shelf;—
For, ostensively, he, for vocation, had taken
A chebauk for the vending of whiskey and bacon.

All the vices in camp or in bagnio that thrive,
All the dodges low cunning and baseness contrive
With a thrift that he never, in toll, had displayed,
He availed of in plying his dubious trade.

He was crusty, or rollicking, sullen or gay,
And his views were patched with a tawdry display
Of this virtue which oft by its loneliness shone
Like a tear of the damned dropt on Hecate's soiled zone.

He was coddled, or cursed, as the varying wind
Of his fortune him wafted or left him behind,
It was "Hi-ya! good Robat!" when flush was his purse,
And when otherwise, "Robat, the scoundrel!" or worse.

Was it strange, with a status so clouded with doubt,
That he wandered, uncertain if in, or if out?—
If amenities here could be held to predict
That his function with man was to kick or be kicked?

But the problems which baffle the small and the great
Are, not seldom, resolved by the cunning of Fate;
And the query which Robat, with dullness assayed
Expertly was rendered by Parcens aid.

He had grub-staked a weasened-faced, pinched pioneer—
Let the fact, to his credit, be emphasized here;—
And the guerdon it brought to this quaint Sancho Panza,
And this pinched pioneer, was a splendid bonanza.

A bonanza! Bewilderment dazes his brain
As weird pageants of luxury lengthen their train,
Till credulity falters to grasp what still seems
Those fantastic illusions which mock us in dreams.

But, he sobered at length, and accepted as fate
All the dimples of Fortune, which rendered him great;
And he b[illegible]d and he builded, and bourgeoned so grand
That his works, and his name overshadowed the land.

There were temples and tinselry, train-bands and trulls,
Which his o-gnomen boasted, and numerous gulls
Of the learned and illiterate—youthful and hoar—
Who conceded to honor this image of ore.

There was "Robat Lucinda," regardless of shame,
And a genuant horse that was plumed with his name;
There were "Robat Sombreros," and "Robat Designs,"—
And a "Robat Diviner," for locating mines,

And when imminent peril o'ershadowed the state
And the nat of party was edict of Fate,
To be found in the breach at his country's command,
There was Robat, the popular—Robat the grand.

And the learned and illiterate, youthful and hoar,
The pecuniary charms of their candidate roar,
And extol the thin virtue of Robat the winner—
But they fail to remember Old Robat, the sinner.

For the glitter of wealth, and the thrift it may bring,—
—The accretions of power to "boss" and to "ring"—
Have allurements potential, so daring control
That they deaden the conscience and jeopard the soul.

Now 'tis nothing that Robats should live and connive,
For, where foulness is festering vermin will thrive;
And 'tis naught that this Robat all others surpasses,
But 'tis monstrous that men are such gullible asses.

—ANTI-ROBAT.

Mrs. Langtry in the Provinces.

A London correspondent writes: "There is no exaggeration in the reports which have doubtless reached you as to the popularity of Mrs. Langtry, or the enormous success which she has had during her tour in the English provinces. I was in Manchester, on Wednesday last, when she appeared in two performances, playing the part of "Hester Grazebrook" in "The Unequal Match," and that of "Miss Hardcastle" in "She Stoops to Conquer." After the performances, the streets surrounding the theater were crowded with people, and as Mrs. Langtry drove to her hotel, she was greeted with the waving of hats and with applause. The same scenes occurred on her alighting at her hotel, and were again repeated on her leaving for the evening performance. At night, the house was crowded to suffocation. When Mrs. Langtry visits America, I venture to predict that there will be many discussions as to the beauty of this heroine of English society. I don't think that there will be any discussion as to her histrionic ability. While she shows great aptitude for the stage, a certain savoir-faire, which has been acquired by the varied experience of a grande dame de societie, it requires no great critical acumen to discover that she is not an experienced actress. Crudities were detectable in almost every scene, but she never committed any serious blunder; was always acceptable to the audience, and rose in those scenes in which strong passion, queenly dignity and scorn had to be depicted to such power as commanded the applause of the general public and the respect of the critical few. Above all, she wins the sympathies of her audience by her refinement and unpretended modesty. She seems to appeal to the house by her manner for the r kind consideration, as deprecating her own ability and disclaiming the dramatic honors which have been fully acceded to her. My own opinion is that she is over-refined in her portrayal of the character of Hester Grazebrook, the country girl, daughter of a blacksmith, at least in the earlier acts, but in the late scenes, when Hester, having married a nobleman, is supposed to have educated herself to fitly fill her new position in life, Mrs. Langtry would favorably compare with many of our best comediennes. The same principle of criticism applies to her performance of Miss Hardcastle. In all the scenes where she has to appear as a lady of society, she seems to be perfectly at home, but in the famous barmaid scene the lack of abandon revealed the inexperienced actress."

my body belongs to me, that there is a one that owns it, that calls it his own, that uses it? Do you not discover that you yourself are something from it? What is it that leads me to say "I want to impress my soul on the soul of my child over there in another state," You want to do it, but your head nor your hand. You must use some instruments to carry out your commands. I tell my child a thousand miles away that I love her. Any one should be able to see that there is a being that uses the body as its instrument. There is no man not lost to manhood who does not see that he is not only not descended from a beast but is a glorious, invisible reality. What man does is to think. What man does is to feel. What man does is to love, to will, to grow in knowledge, in power, in God-likeness, to grow towards heaven. What the body does is to convert corn and cabbage and change them into flesh and go back to dust. He cares for his body. When it is out of order he sends for a doctor and says, "Doctor, my machine is out of order, and I want you to repair it. I want to attend to my business, want to go over into these mountains, and I want you to fix my machine." Anybody that is a man knows what that means. Now, David, I am able to answer your question.

Sometimes there is in a household a peculiar kind of interest. The door of mother's chamber is closed. It is announced that a baby has come into the world, and there is through all the house a quiet joy. The little thing that is visible and tangible is the body the baby is living in. We look in the face, and we see the color of flesh. We look in the eye, and there is no expression. We follow the history of this babe. It grows, taking nourishment from its mother's breast. The nourishment fills out its limbs, it takes other nourishment. It grows from five pounds to twenty, from twenty to a form steady, strong, and that runs about, from twenty to fifty, from fifty to a hundred and fifty. And then it is a young man, with a beard; or a young woman ready for marriage. But there was another kind of being. We could not see it. You look into the eye in ten or twenty days, and the child looks at you. You see that there is somebody looking out of the window with an interrogation point on the eyelids. The soul grows. In two years it knows a good many things—mother, sister, father, home, house, neighbor. It grows and unfolds. It gains knowledge from books and the power of enjoyment. It looks through up to God and to eternity. It becomes acquainted with God and truth until almost disorganized. Its eye is fixed on the mountains and gazes into eternity, and at the principalities and powers of heaven. And when the body becomes dissolved he flees away into the empyrians, and among God's angels, and into immortality, to be with these glories in the eternal world. David, David, see that world when for a hundred million years his knowledge shall grow broad and deep, and a voice comes ringing from that peak, "When I was a child, I spake as a child I understood as a child, I thought as a child, but when I became a man, I put away childish things." David, see you that soul by the throne of God? The earth has disappeared, suns and stars have passed away. In that soul your question is answered. O that we might be this! Step to-day and look towards eternity. Take in the effects of existence, the possibilities, what may be, what ought to be. Every soul is formed to sweep through the spaces and to wear that robe. Look towards eternity, above the golden mountains, above the silver plains, above earth and the beautiful stars, and see what future possibilities await these souls, how like angels they are, how they never die, but go on and on through eternity, higher and higher forever. One soul is worth more than all this universe, sun, moon stars, and all.

It was announced that the coupons due on some of the water bonds had been allowed to go to default. Ordered that a committee of one be appointed to confer with city treasurer in regard to the payment of the interest. Alderman Anderson was appointed.

Petition of board of trade asking the use of the council room was, on motion of Alderman Crowell, taken up. Alderman Crowell favored it because the board of trade is for the public good. Alderman Anderson said that one council room had been abandoned because it was unfit for meeting, and that he was opposed to allowing the room to anyone. A motion to grant the petition was allowed by the following vote: Ayes Coombs, Crowell, Downing, Wheeler. No Anderson.

Rule 11 was changed so as to place the council room in charge of the city marshal instead of the city clerk.

The petitions in regard to extending the water pipes were taken up, but nothing was done.

Plans for the city hall were explained by Alderman Anderson.

On motion of Alderman Crowell, adjourned for two weeks.

TELEGRAPH BREVITIES.

Butler is making another effort for the governorship of Massachusetts.

Rear Admiral David Stockton McDougal died at San Francisco, yesterday, of Bright's disease.

Harmony mills at Cohoes, N. Y., re-opened yesterday morning, but only seventy operatives resumed work.

A fire was raging at Gardiner, Me., last night, and a good portion of the manufacturing section of the city had already been destroyed with many dwellings. The flames were spreading rapidly and assistance had been asked from Augusta and Hallowell.

At a colored camp meeting Sunday evening at Macon, Georgia, Eastalup, a deputy marshal, shot a fleeing prisoner named Jake Tarropy, killing him. This infuriated the mob, who ran the deputy into a house, where an innocent white man, J. Howard, was shot and beaten to death, they thinking that he was the deputy.

SCHOFIELD'S PATENT

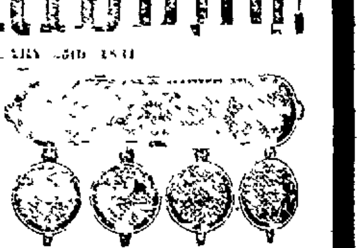

CAKE GRIDDLE!

PATENTED JANUARY 25th 1881

This Griddle is made of cast iron, weighs about 4 lbs, sets right on top the stove (fits any stove), will heat in five minutes or cool in five minutes and bakes six cakes at once, holds the steam generated in the cake until ready to turn, making the lightest and most palatable griddle cake ever tasted by mortal man.

Sample Griddle, this size, by Express, 75 Cents.

This Griddle is same thing only one size larger and bakes eight cakes at once

These Griddles are worth their weight in gold for the purpose they are intended for and no one after using them would use any other kind. You see the round pans being hinged separately can be easily turned into the long pan as soon as it is full and the round pan returned again ready for another cake. The Griddle was tested last season by 3 500 families and was found to be thoroughly practical a genuine novelty and a decided success This will be the best selling article next fall and winter ever invented.

Sample Griddle, this size, by Express, $1 00.

The small size bakes 6 Cakes per minute, and is intended for Private Families.

The large size will bake 8 Cakes per minute, and is just the thing for Hotels, Restaurants, Boarding Houses, Etc.

This Griddle is destined to come into general use at once, from its utility, convenience and price, and will supersede all Soapstone and other griddles in a short time and have an immense sale this fall and winter.

The Fuel this Griddle will save when used in preference to Soapstone and other thick griddles will pay for itself every month GUARANTEED TO DO IT!
